The U.S. and The World

A free-lance New York television reporter says his 36-foot boat has been used in anti-Castro operations with the sanction of the U. S. government and with funds supplied by the Central Intelligence Agency. Alexander I. Rorke, 36, said he was accompanied on eight of 11 missions to Cuba by students from American universities. Rorke's boat, The Violynn III, was seized by the British in the Bahamas with 17 anti-Castro raiders aboard. Although, he said, no U. S. agency had paid for recent trips, the CIA had financed two earlier deliveries to Cuba of anti-Castro propaganda material. The Cuban missions were primarily for the purpose of landing guerrilla soldiers and establishing liaison with the Cuban underground, he added. The CIA refused comment.
